

Chris Heaps

With youthful enthusiasm on his side Chris Heaps knows how to work out what is best for you and your home, and he knows the properties and homes of Canterbury.

Starting his own business 5 years ago Chris followed a passion for the outdoors and started working for people like you around Christchurch. Calling his company Treeman, Chris relished the challenges his role as an arborist placed in front of him daily. Getting the company to its peak, and having a staff of three skilled professionals working for him around town, Chris decided it was time to try his hand at something he felt would suit his personality more – real estate.

His history as a project manager for a local construction firm at a young age also presents the professionalism and approachability that Chris brings to the table. With the majority of work undertaken in his previous careers being obtained through repeat business and word-or-mouth from his multitudes of happy clients, Chris has helped many Christchurch families to achieve their goals.

A savvy business sense combined with a desire to achieve the best in everything he does, Chris is the choice for you. A specialty in residential properties, Chris has seen what a home like yours should achieve. “Many homes are on the cusp of the next level in terms of property values” he states, “I’ve seen through my work as an arborist what can be done to a home to achieve something great”.

If you want the best service from a real estate agent that is firmly planted in the new school method of sales approach and person to person networking that gets results, then Chris Heaps is the agent that will guide you through the forest of real estate choices today!
